WOMEN OF CHICAGO ENGAGE IN CAMPAIGN FOR CLEAN FOOD

CHICAGO, June 6.—War was declared today on the insanitary grocery and meat market. A score of club women, gathered in the rooms of the Chicago Women's club in the Fine Arts building as representatives of the city's housewives, opened hostilities by organizing the Chicago Clean Food club. The attacks of the new organization are to be made on the dealers who leave foodstuffs unprotected from contaminating flies and dirt on their counters. Such dealers are to feel the force of the new club's warfare in two ways. Housewives are to be urged not to buy food at such stores and prosecutions for violations of the sanitary laws of city and state are to be instituted.

The meeting was called at the instance of Mrs. John C. Bley of 5046 Washington Park court, secretary of the Fifty-First Street Food and Market club. Mrs. Bley was elected temporary chairman of the new organization and Mrs. George R. Cravens of 5044 Washington Park court was made temporary secretary.

Dr. Thomas J. Bryan, state analyst for the Illinois state food commission, and Chief Sanitary Inspector C. S. Ball attended the meeting and were called upon for suggestions as the work of organization was taken up.

Submits List of Objects.
A tentative set of objects was submitted by Mrs. Bley and was referred to a committee for further action, as follows:

To make conditions sanitary in all stores where foodstuffs are handled.
To improve the general appearance of market districts.

To spread the knowledge among housewives of the state and city laws pertaining to foodstuffs.

To increase the interest among housewives in sanitation.

To obtain more adequate food laws.
To stimulate and encourage activity on the part of the various officials who have to do with the enforcement of sanitary regulations.

Says Officials Need Spur.
The last object was added to Mrs. Bley's original list at the suggestion of Mr. Ball.

"City and state officials need encouragement and need to be stimulated," he said. "I know it helps me to be encouraged by an organization of this kind."

Proceeding the work of organization the women engaged in an internal discussion, in the course of which a variety of questions was put to Dr. Bryan and Mr. Ball. The "cafeteria" system of handling food came in for censure from several sources. Several of the women agreed that the food ought to be inclosed in glass cases and handed out by the attendants instead of picked up by the various purchasers.

Dr. Bryan said he thought it would be difficult to enforce such a regulation, notwithstanding the wisdom of such a measure.

Sees Flaw in Plan.
"Persons who go to cafeteria lunch-rooms as a rule want to select their own articles of food," Dr. Bryan said.

"For instance, you will see a person approach a counter where cuts of pie are stacked half a dozen deep and pick out the largest cut, no matter where it may be in the stack. The conditions would be worse, so long as such a system prevails, if the food were placed in glass cases, because too many coat sleeves would be rubbed against the inside of the cases. It would be ideal to have cases and an attendant to handle the food, but that is entirely out of harmony with the scheme of the cafeteria."

Bread was pointed out as a food in the handling of which dealers largely are likely to be neglectful, so far as observance of sanitation is concerned.

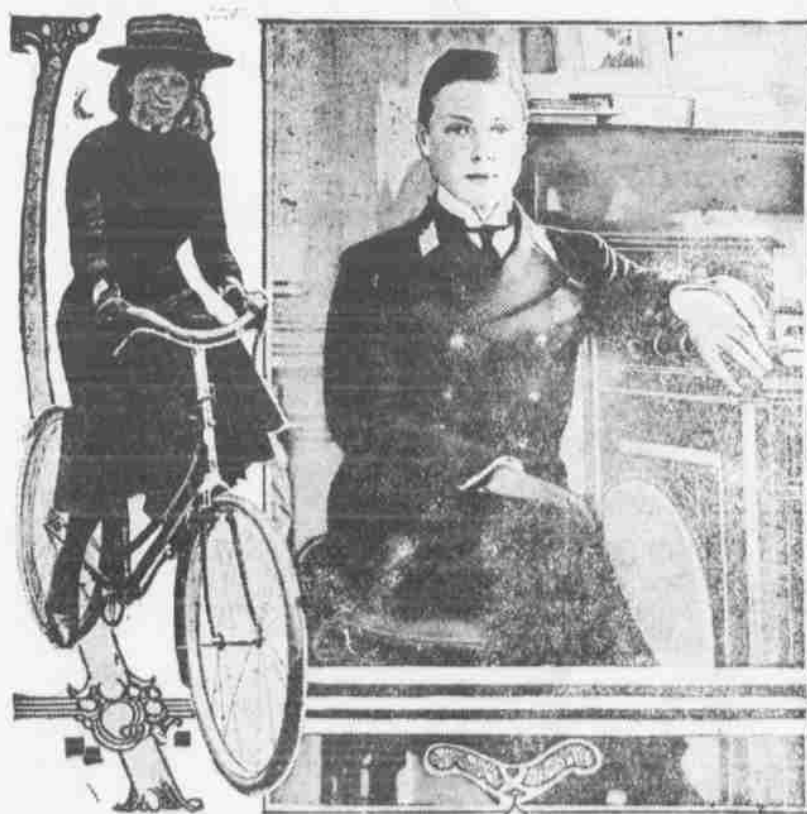

"The dealer ought to be compelled to see that every loaf of bread is protected, instead of having it lie uncovered on the counters," said one woman.

Bread Falls in Street; Sold.
"Yes, and the conditions on the bread wagons are horrible," said another woman. "I saw two loaves of bread fall out of a baker's wagon in front of my home and the driver stopped, picked up the two loaves and threw them back into the wagon to be sold with the other bread."

"There are even worse things than that done with bread," Dr. Bryan declared.

"This organization will have to put an end to all this," Mrs. Bley said. "We can accomplish our purpose by working in harmony with all Chicago housewives, the health department, the police department and all other city agencies."

PRINCE OF WALES REACHES LEGAL AGE

Photos copyright, 1912, by Press Association.
PRINCESS MARY AND PRINCE OF WALES.

If you were a boy of eighteen would you like to have your own "special" household, with large suits suitably appointed and set apart in two palaces, with a governor and controller of the household, an equerry and two secretaries, as well as a large staff of servants at special wages and coachmen and groomsmen? Such is going to be the pomp and circumstance which will surround his royal highness the Prince of Wales after June 23, when he reaches his eighteenth birthday and his legal majority.

An ordinary Englishman reaches legal age when he becomes twenty-one. Before that time he is an infant in the eyes of the law, but not so with the Prince of Wales, eldest son of the sovereign. When he becomes eighteen he becomes a man, with all an ordinary man's rights and privileges and with a great many others that go with his exalted station.

Among the important rights which go with the attainment of legal age by the Prince of Wales is the ability to ascend the throne and govern without the aid of a regent in case of the king's death. Also, in case of the sovereign's dire misfortune or prolonged absence the Prince of Wales may at any time after June 23 act in his father's place. At present Edward Albert, prince of Wales, resides in France, whither he was sent by his father a few months ago to acquire knowledge of the French people, language and customs. King George is desirous of cultivating the friendship of the French.

So King George and Queen Mary sent their son to the Marquis de Breteuil, a member of the ancient French aristocracy and a very close friend of King Edward. The marquis has an American wife. For months the prince has been there, and he has been studying French life, inspecting the army and the navy. He is a sailor prince by training, like his father, and takes a keen interest in all things naval. After the celebration of his birthday in England, it was announced recently, he will return to Paris. In August he will return to England to remain permanently, beginning then his course in Oxford university.

The prince is a tall, slender, unassuming sort of person, with a thoroughly English love of sports. He dresses well, of course, but recently created a sensation in Paris by appearing in public with only the top button of his coat fastened. Immediately the leaders of fashion decided that a new mode was coming in, and the buttonholes became the rage. But, alas, the next day the prince buttoned up his coat and the new fashion died.

Prince Edward, born June 23, is the eldest of the six children of King George and Queen Mary. There are five sons and one daughter. The latter is known officially as Princess Victoria Alexandra Alice Mary, but by the British public and the world in general she is called Princess Mary. She is only a young girl of fifteen, but there are already surmises concerning her matrimonial future. She will have considerable to say about that when the time comes, for she is a young lady with a will of her own.

The photograph of her riding a bicycle is one of the latest made. She is fond of bicycling, angling and other forms of outdoor sport, taking after her father in this respect rather than her mother. From the latter she inherits a taste for domestic occupations.

The princess is tall for her age and will be taller still, it is expected. She is not handsome or beautiful, as are her cousins, the two Connaught princesses, Patricia and Crown Princess Margaret of Sweden, but she has a fair face, light hair and eyes and is not unattractive.

WALTON WILLIAMS.

GOLF, TENNIS, BATHING.

Nothing is more invigorating than a game of tennis or golf and nothing more refreshing at the close than a dip in the ocean where the beach is free from coral like that at Haleiwa. Visitors pronounce it the best in the islands and the management of the Haleiwa Hotel are confident that the judgment passed by tourists is correct. At a cost of six dollars and fifty cents one may journey to Haleiwa on the limited Saturday afternoon and return by the same fast train Sunday night and that covers all expenses at the hotel and for transportation. It is a cheap trip and many persons are taking advantage of the low rate.
